NEWBURGH.

Revv. Joseph Gandier, for many years a resident of Newburgh, and pastor of the Presbyterian church, passed away at his home here on Saturday morning of last week. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon and was conducted by the Revs. Mr. Nickle, assisted by Rev. Dr. McGillivray, of Kingston. After the ceremony the remains were laid to rest beside his wife, who passed away one year ago. Seven children survive, Misses Annie and Lilith and Ernest, of Newburgh, Mrs. Thompson, of Napanee, Dr. Joe Gandier, of Clinton, and Dr. Alfred Gandier and Mrs. (Professor) Falconer, of Toronto. Prof. and Mrs. Matheson, of Kingston, were in attendance at the funeral of Mr. Gandier.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wilson, of Winnipeg, are visiting with Mrs. G. B. Wilson for a couple of weeks.

Mr. Forbes, of Markham, has been appointed principal of Newburgh High School for the ensuing year, and will have the occupancy of Mr. John Madden's house on Main street.

Miss Alma Briscoe is spending the week in Kingston with her friend, Mrs. Will Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dafoe, of Tweed, visited with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Embury, of Wesley, for a few days last week.

Mr. John Paterson was in Stirling attending the funeral of his brother, who passed away from the result of a stroke.

Mrs. G. A. Drummond and Mrs. Margaret Mitchell are enjoying a two weeks trip to Minnesota and other western points.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Holden died on Sunday last, following a few days illness. The funeral was conducted on Tuesday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Nickle, pastor of the Methodist church, and the body was laid to rest in the Newburgh cemetery. Many friends gathered at the home to sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Holden in their loss.

Mr. Bowerman, of Detroit, called on his father, Mr. Dan Bowerman, on Monday, after an absence of over 11 years.

Mrs. James Boyce is visiting in Watertown and Syracuse for a few weeks.

MIGRATORY BIRDS CONVENTION ACT

A summary of the Migratory Birds Convention Act is given below. This is the law which is based upon the Treaty with the United States. Any enquiries concerning this law may be addressed to the Commissioner of the Canadian National Parks, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

OPEN SEASONS.

Ontario—Both dates inclusive.

Ducks, Geese, Brant or Rails—Sept. 1 to Dec. 15.

Wilson or Jack-snipe, Blackbellied and Golden Plovers and the Greater and Lesser Yellowlegs.—Sept. 1 to Dec. 15.

Woodcock—Sept. 15 to Nov. 30.

CLOSED SEASONS.

There is a closed season in Ontario on swans, wood duck, eider duck (the latter may be taken during the open season for ducks on the Hudson Bay coast) cranes, curlew, willet, godwits, upland plover, avocets, knots, oystercatchers, dowitchers, phalaropes, stilts, surf-birds, turnstones, and all the shore-birds not provided with an open season in above schedule.

There is a closed season throughout the year on the following non-game birds: Auks, auklets, bitterns, fulmars, gannets, grebes, guillemots, gulls, herons, jaegers, loons, murres, petrels, puffins, shearwaters, and terns; and there is a closed season throughout the year on the following insectivorous birds: Bobolinks, catbirds, chickadees, cuckoos, flickers, fly-catchers, grosbeaks, humming-birds, kinglets, martins, meadow-larks, nighthawks, nut-hatches, orioles, robins, shrikes, swallows, swifts, tanagers, titmice, thrushes, vireos, warblers, whip-poor-wills, woodpeckers, and wrens, and all other perching birds which feed entirely or chiefly on insects.

No person shall kill, capture, injure, take or molest migratory game birds during the closed season. Sale of these birds is forbidden.

The killing, capturing, taking, injuring or molesting of insectivorous insectivorous and migratory non-game birds is prohibited.

PENALTY.

Every person who violates any provision of this Act or any regulation shall, for each offence, be liable upon summary conviction to a fine of not more than three hundred dollars and not less than ten dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to both fine and imprisonment.

DECORATIONS FOR OLD HOME WEEK

The Decoration Committee are prepared to assist all who will decorate their residences and places of business for Old Home Week, by offering them Bunting and Flags at Cost Prices. This also applies to Auto and Truck owners who are planning to decorate their cars for the parade.

Mr. C. A. Walters, Chairman of the Decoration Committee, will have supplies on hand at the Hydro Electric Office, and a display of the different lines is being made in the Hydro windows. Look these over and make an early selection of what you will require so that the Committee will be able to meet all demands for this class of decorating material.

Below are the prices of the different lines:

Blue or Red Bunting, 30 inches wide, 40c. yard.

White Bunting, 36 inches wide, 8c. yard.

Tricolor, (Red, White and Blue), 12 inches wide, 13c. yard.

Banners, Blue and White or Red and White, 42 x 60, 75c. each.

Bunting Flags, Red, Blue and White, 40 x 56, 50c. each.

Dominion Flags, 33 x 47, 50c. each.

Assorted Flags of the Allies, Assorted Flags on Sticks, 14 x 24 x 33, 25c. each.

18 inch each.

Small Silk Flags, assorted, on sticks, 40c. dozen.

Medium sized Silk Flags on sticks, 60c. a dozen.

Canadian and British Flags, on sticks, 11 x 14, 13c. each.

Canadian and British Flags on sticks, 18 x 24, 25c. each.

Canadian and British Flags, on sticks, 18 x 30, 30c. each.

Small Canadian and British Flags, on sticks, at 5c. and 7c. each.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure this class of decorating material at a very small cost, and it is to be hoped that our citizens will take full advantage of the opportunity.

Crow Not a Swift Flyer.

The crow is the least rapid of a list of 22 migratory birds, flying an insignificant average of 45 feet a second, or 30 miles an hour. Of course this speed maintained steadily in an automobile would mean a very fair rate of progress, defying the speed laws in many communities. Most birds, however, do better than the crow. Curlews and jacksnipes can fly 55 and 65 feet a second, while quails, prairie chickens and ruffed grouse can make 75 feet. The dove can reach a speed of 100 feet a second, or 68 miles an hour, although its usual rate is less. Redheads, blue-winged teals, green-winged teals, Canada geese, and different varieties of brant can fly over 100 feet per second, ranging in speed from 68 to 88 miles an hour, but usually fly at a much slower rate.

DESERONTO.

Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, of Little Falls, N.Y., were recent motor visitors to Deseronto as tourists en route to Toronto. Mr. Brown is a former resident of Deseronto, having spent his boyhood days in this territory, residing with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Brown, on West Thomas street. The family later migrating to the United States. Mr. Brown began a study of banking work, and now fills an important position with a New York State bank. His many former associates are pleased to hear of his success in financial circles.

After a summer's visit with his brother's, Mr. D. Walker and Mrs. G. Walker, at their home, East Dundas street, Mrs. John Denmark and son, Jack, have returned to their home at Kalamazoo, Mich.

Construction work has commenced on the Provincial Highway through Deseronto, a number of men and teams being engaged in grading operations at the eastern limit of the town. For long it was thought that this would be engaged in the construction of the road, which the contractors hope to complete in a period of two months.

After a two weeks' visit with relatives and friends in Napanee and territory, Mr. John McKendry and mother departed by motor for Cobourg, from where they will take the latter for the return to their home at Rochester, N.Y.

After a week's auto trip in the Muskoka district, Mr. and Mrs. T. McWain and son, Gerald, and granddchild, Marjorie, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Gault, returned to their homes in Deseronto. During the stay in the Muskoka district the party enjoyed a hundred mile boat trip through the many islands of that territory and a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Covert, who is Canadian National agent at Torrence. They also visited the famous summer hotel at Atherley, conducted by the Therrien Bros., Deseronto boys.

The C. and C. Club weekly dances patronized by the largest number on Thursday evening that has gathered since the commencing of the series of social evenings and dances. Many parties were in attendance from Napanee, Picton, Belleville, Trenton and the surrounding territory.

The Deseronto Juvenile Lacrosse team will visit Port Hope on Wednesday, August 27th, for a sudden death game with the Juvenile Athletics. This should be an interesting game as the Deseronto Juveniles are going strong. A number of the boys intend to express their intention of being in attendance.

The E. C. Metcalfe Canning Co. has completed the largest pack of peas in the history of the company. Accommodation has been made for a large acreage of peas but the quantity delivered for teratment was beyond expectations, and the pack is many cases over the estimate. With large quantities of corn and tomatoes rapidly maturing, the season's work for the canning company will tax their capacity.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Culhane and son, of Rochester, are auto tourists to Deseronto and territory, and visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Fox for a day.

Mrs. Donald Wright suffered a loss on Wednesday which will necessitate his confinement to grue and bananas as a food for a few days. In melting excitedly over a record catch of bass, his false teeth slipped from his mouth in about a twelve-foot depth of water.

After a week's visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sharpe and children, Marvin and Mavis, left Friday morning for a short visit with relatives in Toronto, after which they will return to their home in Detroit.

A large crowd gathered at James McFarlane's grove on Wednesday evening for attendance at the social and dance held under the auspices of the Anglican church, Sharpe's Hill, and all report a very enjoyable evening. As a result of the endeavors of those in charge of affairs a handsome amount was added to the funds of the church.

The Havelock Midgets lacrosse team visited Deseronto on Thursday afternoon for the return game with the Deseronto Midgets and were successful in defeating the Deseronto Team by the score of 6-2. The Havelock players had a decided advantage over the Deseronto players in size and weight which added much to their winning ability. The game was well played from start to finish and those in attendance witnessed a fine exhibition of play.

After a short visit to relatives in Brownville, N.Y., Mrs. Robert Masters and son, Amos, have returned to their home in Deseronto.

Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Creegan and children returned by auto today from a short visit to relatives and friends in Lyndhurst.

Wiping Out Pests.

A record of 303 pocket gophers and 99 moles caught in 11 months ending in November, obtained for Roy Hanenkrat, an Oregon boy, a prize of $25. Another boy, Ferdinand Becker, caught 220 moles and received a second prize of $15. These boys were taking part in a contest organized in Tillamook county, Oregon, to eradicate these pests. The county was divided into three districts, and prizes amounting to $50 were allotted to each district. Forty boys and girls entered the contest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY REV. C. G. TRUMBULL.
(Editor of The Sunday School Times).

JESUS TALKS WITH A SAMARITAN WOMAN.

Sunday, Aug. 31—John 4: 4-12.

Golden Text—God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him ine spirit and in truth, (John 4 : 24).

Our Lord, in His earthly lifetime, could be weary in body, but He was never sick. He was "wearied with His journey," as He rested by Jacob's well; at another time, in the midst of a storm on Galilee, "He was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow" (Mark 5 :38). But there is no record of any illness in His earthly experience; for disease is at least incipient corruption, and "He, whom God raised again, saw no corruption," either after or before His death (Psa. 16 :10; Acts 13 :37).

When we read that, to go from Judea into Galilee, "He must needs go through Samaria," we may well believe that the inspired word "must" refers to more than a geographical necessity. He could have gone east of the Jordan. But the One, who as a twelve-year-old boy said, "I must be about my Father's business," also "must needs" keep an appointment made before the foundation of the world with a lost woman who must be found and saved in Samaria. Thank God for the "must needs" that brought Christ into your life! As a Sunday school teacher, are you obedient to the "must" that would save every member of your class?

Wearied though He was, our Lord did not spare Himself when an opportunity for soul-winning came. He asked the woman of Samaria for a drink of water, not to quench his own thirst, but to quench hers. He, the Master Fisherman, would have us become fishers of men, and this "catch" of His is worth studying closely.

The fisherman begins with bait, and a request for help is good bait for most people. You can almost always get another person interested if you ask that one to do something for you.

But was not this extraordinary request challenging her surprised interest as her reply showed (v. 9). Let us not be afraid to be unconventional in our soul-winning. A saint of God two generations ago, called Uncle Johnny Vassar, talked of Christ and salvation to every one, in season and out of season. After one of his unexpected interviews on a train one day with a lady sitting alongside him in the car seat, she said to her husband later, "A stranger on the train today asked me if I was saved."

"I hope you told him it was none of his business," replied her husband.

"Oh, but if you could have seen his face, and heard his voice as he asked me," she said, "you would have thought it was his business."

And then came a still more surprising word from our Lord to the Samaritan woman. It was in three parts:

If you knew what God's Gift is.

If you knew Who was asking you for water.

You would ask Him for something greater than you could ever give Him.

In her sin-blinded obtuseness the woman misses His whole point, and assures the Son of God and Lord of Lords, that, of course, he is not to be compared with the patriarch Jacob—crafty, tricky, rebellious, but finally saved old Jacob, who said when he was a hundred years older than Jesus at this time, "For and evil have the day of the years of my life been." Truly our Lord was dealing with a hard case.

Our Lord patiently replied that the best that Jacob could offer was water that could quench only the physical thirst, and that for but a short time, while He was offering water that would quench spiritual thirst for all eternity.

How many of us have dared to believe that word of Christ's "shal lnever thirst ?" We who have received Him as Saviour, and therefore who have the water of life—do we, from time to time, have spiritually thirsty experiences? "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." A gushing, irrepressible, overflowing stream always. He said it again in John 7 :37-38. If it is not our experience as Christians, it is only because we do not dare to believe Him.

After another ignorant, unseeing answer from the woman, the Fisherman becomes the Physician and as Surgeon begins to cut deep into this sinful woman's life. She tries in vain to sidetrack the conversation to an impersonal discussion of religion, but Christ now leads on, with authority, into a statement about the searching requirements of worshipping God. And after one more faltering, evasive reply by the woman, about the coming of the Messiah in the vague future, our Lord's words reach the tremendous climax, confronting her with the inescapable personal issue, "I that speak unto thee am He." But—"He" is not in the Greek; our Lord used of Himself the eternal name of Jehovah, "I Am."

And the weary, sinful woman avoided and evaded no longer; her eyes were opened; she believed, and was saved.

Then she went back to the people who knew her life and her sin to tell them of whom she had found, and who had found her; and they must have seen the great change in her—old things passed away, behold all things became new—for multitudes believed her; and then they believed Him and were saved. "And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on Him for the saying of the woman." Many more believed because of His own word; and said unto the woman, Now we believe, for we have heard Him ourselves, and we know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world."

Verse 6.—A man in weariness.
Verse 7.—A woman in need.
Verses 7, 9—A surprising request.
Verses 10, 13, 14.—A surprising offer.
Verses 16-18.—A surprising disclosure.
Verses 21-24—Authoritative teaching.
Verses 25, 26, 42.—The Saviour of the world.

Youth and the Stars.

We wonder what happened after the conversation quoted below. It is contained in "A Laugh a Day Keeps the Doctor Away." Was the observation really scientific, and is it a measure of the mind of the youth of to-day, or was it merely a "stall" for the benefit of the listener?

"On a hotel porch at a summer resort a visitor approached, in the dark, the spot where a beautiful young thing with bobbed hair and melting baby-blue eyes was sitting with an adoring youth.

"As he neared the pair the newcomer heard her say: 'Aren't the stars just beautiful to-night? I love to sit and look at the stars on a night like this and think about science. Science is so interesting, so wonderful; don't you think so? Now you take astronomy: Astronomers are such marvellous men! I can understand how they have been able to figure out the distances to the moon and to all the other planets, and the size of the sun, and how fast it travels and all. But how in the world do you suppose they ever found out the right names of all those stars?'"

Union Secretary or Vaudevillian?

Some time ago, J. H. Thomas, M.P., Colonial Secretary in the MacDonald Cabinet, was walking along the High Street of a northern town when he met a railway guard and his wife. Mr. Thomas, who was dressed in sporting tweeds, turned to a friend and said: "You wring me," whereupon he seized the guard's hand and shook it warmly.

"You don't know me?" he said; and the man, impressed but puzzled, admitted that he did not.

"I'm the secretary of your union," Mr. Thomas said. "I'm J. H. Thomas, M.P."

"Well, mister, I'm glad to meet you," said the guard. "I was just sayin' to the wife you was some bigwig or other; but, to tell you the truth, I thought you was the first turn at the Tivoli."

A rich strike of silver lead ore has been made on Galena Hill, Yukon Territory. One vein is eighteen feet in width, and shows 70 per cent lead with $0 to 50 ounces of silver. Several big mining interests are reported as active in this area.

The manufacture of wooden boxes is an important industry in British Columbia. There are 28 box-making plants in the province, representing a capital of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, about 1,200 employees and an annual payroll of not less than $1,250,000.

So popular has the bungalow camp system established by the Canadian Pacific Railway become that it will be necessary to extend it greatly. This statement was made recently by C. B. Foster, Passenger Traffic Manager, after a visit to the hotels and camps in the Rockies.

That the farmers of Western Canada are now giving increasing attention to the improvement of their home surroundings is shown by the fact that they have not only planted 5,250,000 trees distributed by two government forestry stations this year but have also purchased large quantities from private nurseries.

Summer fishing commenced on Lesser Slave Lake on July 28th and will close September 30th. Operators have been limited to a catch of 1,500,000 pounds of whitefish but no limit has been placed on pickerel and jack fish, as the market for these varieties is restricted. Four fish companies are operating this summer and will ship to Chicago via Dominion Express.

Imports of Canadian produce and manufacture into Australia received during the year ended June 30th, 1924, amounted in value to £5,064,253, an expansion of £1,899,803 over the previous year. It is the largest volume of trade yet recorded between Canada and Australia. The greatest increase was in motor chassis though a good volume of trade was also done in rubber goods, boots and shoes.

What is claimed to be a world's record for relaying rails was established by a crew of men on the Transcontinental Railway, in the New Brunswick district recently. In two days the 220 men in the gang tore up 29.7 miles of old 85-lb. rails and replaced them with new. All available data states that the former Canadian record was 17 miles, which exceeds that established in the United States.

The "Empress of Scotland," one of the Canadian Pacific Railway's finest liners, docked at Quebec on August 8th with a passenger list crowded with important names. Among them were Lord Beaverbrook, the Canadian financier, Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, whose offer of a fifty thousand dollar prize for the best plan tending to maintain world peace created so much interest recently, and E. W. Beatty, K.C., Chairman and President, Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Beatty had just concluded a most successful tour of Europe with the object of attracting capital and immigrants to Canada. He spoke with great enthusiasm of the prospects of obtaining both and especially anticipated an influx of fine new Canadians from Denmark.

Waste of Public Money.

If letters of acknowledgment could be abolished in government departments, thousands of dollars could be saved. This is the conclusion of one who has seen the wheels go 'round.

Everybody gets a letter of acknowledgment.

If you transmit anything to a federal bureau you get a letter in reply stating that it has been received.

If you write for a job, you probably won't get it—but you will get a nice letter of acknowledgment. It will be typewritten as carefully as if destined for the President himself.

It will have a file number and all the rest of it. The wonder is that nobody has set himself up as a collector of government letters of acknowledgment, he could undoubtedly get thousands of fine specimens in a short time.—Washington Star.

Tracing Migratory Birds.

Returns from banded birds sent in to the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture constantly throw new light on the long distances traveled by migratory birds in their instinctive search for a warm place in winter. Mallard duck No. 102755, banded at Browning, Ill., on March 12, was killed November 9 about seven miles southwest of Lexington, Neb., about 600 miles west. No. 102470, also a mallard duck, banded at Browning on March 7, was shot November 12 at Leavenworth, Kan., some 80 miles west of where it started. Both of these ducks probably made a spring flight northward and then south in the fall to the point of capture.

PENITENTIARIES AND YOUNG OR MILD OFFENDERS

DR. J. G. SHEARER, SOCIAL SERVICE COUNCIL OF CANADA.

The writer recently found himself a fellow passenger with two youngsters fifteen and seventeen years of age, who were in handcuffs on their way to a penitentiary under sentences of three years for house-breaking and stealing. Unless paroled meantime these boys must associate more or less closely with a large number of experienced, expert and hardened criminals for three years. Whatever they were on entering the penitentiary there is little room for doubt as to what they will be when they leave, in spite of the influence of excellent guards, Chaplain, Salvation Army and the like.

Is it right, is it socially wise, to expose young fellows (for whom surely there is good hope of restoration to virtue and good citizenship) to such seriously demoralizing influence for so long a period? There can hardly be two answers to this question. Besides, society has a large measure of responsibility for their being law breakers at all. Born of parents weak or worse, allowed to play truant from school, educational curriculum and methods ill adapted to their special needs, no supervised recreational facilities, open pool rooms and consequent companionship with older boys already criminal, and the beginning of crime for lads easy. Is not society under the greater moral obligation to make it possible, as easy as possible, for them to get back to a life of self-respect and social decency? Instead, society compels them after two years with worse criminals, where they get a thorough schooling in real crime before they get a second chance to go straight.

There is a better way.

For delinquents from the age of juvenility (17 and 18 in some provinces, 16 in most) the Juvenile Delinquents Act should be in force and Juvenile Courts be set up. Then the gaol is forbidden and if probation fails, the Industrial School with others of their own years and experience opens. For those above the juvenile age and say under twenty-one, Reformatories should be provided where restoration rather than punishment is the ideal and object, and where work, training, recreation, amusement and religious influence all combine to build up character, make life interesting and put these youngsters beyond the likelihood, if not the possibility, of recommitting crime in the coming days of freedom.

Ontario alone has established such reformatories, though Quebec has declined to do so.

In England, what is called the Borstal System has been in operation for many years. To these reform schools all prisoners from sixteen to twenty-one are sent. They are as little like prisons and as much like schools as they can be made. The result is that only a very small proportion of these young people return to the reformatory or go to the penitentiary.

It is a social crime of the first magnitude for Canada or any of her Provinces, for lack of reformatory schools whether for false economy or for sheer indifference, to banish young people of either sex to a penitentiary where they can hardly escape demoralization of character and a schooling in crime and vice. And our Governments will make provision as soon as they know the serious people make the demand. The attitude at once a challenge to, and an opportunity of, ministering in His Name, to these little ones whose plight is indeed sorry and whose need is very great.

JAMAICAN TRADE.

Gen. Gunn Outlines Need for Altering the Agreement.

Conditions favorable to trade between Canada and the islands of the West Indies are reported by Brig.-Gen. John A. Gunn, president of Gunns Limited, Toronto, who has just returned from an extended tour of Bermuda, the Bahamas, the Leeward and Windward Islands, British Guiana, Venezuelan and Columbian ports, the Dutch West Indies, the Canal zone and Jamaica, and who points out that on the whole the sentiment is distinctly favorable towards Canada and Canadian goods. Of the Indies, Jamaica, being the largest and the most important of the British West Indian colonies, and having a population of about a million, should be given particular consideration by Canadians wishing to expand their trade relations. In that connection, Gen. Gunn was pleased to notice that the Jamaican commercial and political interests are taking definite steps towards sending a Government delegation to Ottawa to urge Canada to make some action with regard to the development of trade between the two countries.

"The British and Canadian markets to-day are decidedly of more value to Jamaica than they were a decade ago," the general remarked, "and the best informed public opinion in Jamaica favors the tightening of the Imperial bond in trade matters. Thus it is that Canada's sales to Jamaica show a considerable increase in variety as well as in volume, during the past two or three years. For example, in 1921, Canada supplied but 25 per cent. of Jamaica's flour requirements, but in 1922, Canada's share had risen to 54 per cent. In dried, salted and pickled fish (taken as a whole), she has long been predominant, though of late competition by Newfoundland has been making itself felt. But Canada to-day is selling to Jamaica a wide variety of manufactured goods which formerly were imported from other countries, chiefly the United States, and this trade gives every indication of future increase. Up to a few years ago, Canada was represented in Jamaica mainly by her banks, her life insurance companies, her salt fish, and her "Healing Oil." All these things remain, but many others have come to stay. The establishment of a Trade Commissionership in Jamaica in January, 1922, has undoubtedly been a potent factor in this development.

"Quite naturally," said Gen. Gunn, "Jamaican exporters wish to increase their sales to Canada, and they claim that certain modifications and improvements in the trade agreement are necessary to this end. These modifications fall under two headings, namely, communications, and Canadian duties on certain Jamaican products."

"Let me urge Canadians," says the general in conclusion, "to remember that should Jamaica refuse to renew the agreement when it expires, the same condition would ensue as at present exists in the case of Bermuda, where Canada has no preference and very little share of the trade, and that valuable business would thereby be lost to Canada. I am a strong believer in the efficiency of personal contact; there are really few differences, especially amongst friends, which cannot be settled by a roundtable conference. I therefore ardently hope that Jamaica will send a deputation of business men to Ottawa, and I certainly think that the proposal deserves every encouragement in this country. Modern civilized life depends, ultimately, upon trade, and in these difficult times it behooves the nations of the Empire to stick together. The iron is hot, and now's the time to strike it."

She Wished.

Little Annie was the possessor of rather a large appetite which her mother frequently felt it her bounden duty to curb. At dinner one day she had already had two helpings of chicken, and then she demanded a third.

"No, dear," said her mother firmly, "you can't have any more. You've had quite as much as is good for a little girl. But here is the wishbone. You shall pull it with me, then whoever gets the larger piece will have her wish come true."

The ceremony was gone through, and at the conclusion Anne triumphantly held up the greater portion of the bone.

"How lucky!" exclaimed mother. "You will have your wish now. Tell me what it was."

"I wished for more chicken!" answered Anne, passing her plate.

And That Was Why.

A country schoolmaster was one day crossing some fields when he came to a stile which he had to climb over. It looked as if he would have considerable difficulty in doing so because, on the top bar of the stile sat a small boy eating a very large slab of cake.

Being rather short-sighted, he failed to note the fact that the lad was one of his own pupils, and as he was annoyed at the boy's lack of manners in not moving, he said somewhat sharply:

"Well, my boy, it seems that you are better fed than taught."

"Eas, zur," replied the boy with his mouth full, "I feeds myself, but you teaches me!"

A FORTUNATE GENIUS

LATE LORD KELVIN WAS UNIVERSALLY HONORED.

Lived to Be Recognized as One of the Greatest Scientists Who Had Benefited Mankind—He Was a Great Teacher and Scientist.

Probably one three-hundred-and-sixty-fifth of the world's eminent men, and some not so eminent, have been born and will continue to be born on June 26. They form an imposing company, living and dead, and one of the most illustrious of them was William Thompson, whose birthday fell upon this date in 1824. He lived to become recognized as one of the greatest scientists who had ever benefitted mankind and passed away at the age of 87 as Lord Kelvin, universally honored. He was the foremost mathematician and physicist of the Victorian age, and perhaps did more than any man before or since in extending our knowledge in the realm of electricity. For fifty-three years he lectured and taught in one university, though wealth came to him and he might have retired while still comparatively a young man. But he loved teaching. He loved the pursuit of truth as revealed in the physical world, and for all we know may have considered it an adequate recognition of his fifty years' teaching in the University of Glasgow when upon that memorable occasion he was invited to dine with Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle.

William Thompson was a genius, but he was something better than that. He was a fortunate genius. He was born and developed in circles the most favorable to the cultivation of his extraordinary gifts. There was nothing ever wasted about him. The best he could do he was enabled to do. To his father, Dr. James Thompson, a teacher of mathematics in Belfast, he owed much. His father was his constant adviser. He advised him not only about his studies and arranged so that he might make the most of them, but he advised him about the spending of money, or rather the non-spending of it. Dr. Thompson's theory about money was that it was not meant so much to be spent as to be saved. "Never spend an unnecessary sixpence," he wrote to the lad who was then at Cambridge. In another letter he said: "Use all economy consistent with respectability. Be more circumspect with your conduct and what acquaintances you form. You are young. A false step now, or the acquiring of an improper habit or propensity, might ruin you for life. Frequently look back on your conduct and thence learn wisdom for the future."

In reply the young man protested that he went to as few wine parties as he could, consistent with respectability, and that he never saw the least approach to excess at any of them. It is true that he had some relaxations. He was fond of music and helped found the Cambridge Musical Society, in which concerts he played the French horn. He was also fond of outdoor sports and excelled in rowing. But science was his love. His father had instilled it in him, and had supervised his study to such purpose that when he was ten years old he was able to enter the University of Glasgow, there to dumbfound the older students by the ease with which he solved mathematical problems. At the age of seventeen he was sent to Cambridge by his father, who at this time was a member of the Faculty of Glasgow University, and four years later graduated as Second Wrangler and Smith Prize man. His father sent him to Paris, there to meet and work with Victor Regnault, the greatest experimenter of his time. He had been there only a year when a vacancy occurred in the chair of natural philosophy in Glasgow, and Thompson, then a youth of twenty-two, became a professor in that institution.

He was himself a practical man, and in the laying of the first Atlantic cable in 1866 he played a conspicuous and heroic part. It is conceded that but for his personal attention and the electrical apparatus he invented the great triumph of 1866 would have been postponed for twenty years. He was consulting engineer for the enterprise and accompanied the several expeditions regardless of the dangers to which he was exposing himself. In truth, Thompson was so engrossed in the great work that he was oblivious to dangers of any kind except the possible danger of failure.

Gradually he built up his fame until he was recognized as the great electrical wizard of the day, a result not unexpected in one who at the age of eighteen had contributed to a scientific journal a treatise entitled "On the Uniform Motion of Heat in Homogeneous Bodies, and Its Connection With the Mathematical Theory of Electricity." He was also the first to enunciate the theory now generally held by physicists and geologists that the earth has the rigidity of steel or glass and is solid in the center. He argued that otherwise the friction of its liquid contents would prevent it from whirling round in its well-known way. He was the first to discover the law of electric oscillations or surges produced in the ether by the spark of a Leyden jar, and it is worth noting that wireless telegraphy and the radio are based upon this discovery. More than fifty inventions were credited to Prof. William Thompson and they show that his genius touched and illumined life at many points.

The Conversation Ended.

Thinleigh—You haven't paid him that ten dollars I lent you three months ago, have you?—Judge.

A Paradise of Feathers.

The Farne Islands, which were made safe for bird life recently, can now claim to be the birds' paradise of the North Sea.

One serious rival for that distinction may, however, have to be reckoned with. That is the one-time island stronghold of Heligoland, which now that it has been divested of its fortifications and left to wind and sea, will probably take up its ancient role as a resting-place for migrating birds.

At times so many feathered wayfarers were resting on the island that it almost seemed as if every small bird in the world had come to Heligoland for a visit. For instance, hundreds of thousands of skylarks have been seen here at once, and on one occasion a flight of golden-crested wrens passed over the island continuously, thousands alighting for a brief rest, for three days and nights. Many readers may never have seen a golden-crested wren, yet here they were by the million. And on a certain very dark night 15,000 larks were taken in nets on this little strip of sand.—Answers.

SCOT'S FORTUNE IN AUSTRALIA.

Thirty Thousand Pounds After Thirteen Years in Australia.

Landing in Western Australia in 1911, Robert Carruthers, previously manager of a farm near Gretna Green, is now in a position to sell out and retire with £50,000. When he reached his new homeland he had only £100.

That, briefly, is a story told to the Royal Colonial Institute by Mr. H. P. Colebatch, Agent-General for that part of the great island-continent of Australia. He added that he could give hundreds of individual cases in which men had similarly made good in a comparatively short time.

In 1911, said Mr. Colebatch, Carruthers took out his family of seven and immediately accepted work as a laborer. With his experience he was easily able to obtain a wheat farm allotment, but the fact that it was 300 miles from the capital and sixty from the nearest railway station would have frightened anyone with less grit.

Carruthers bought a horse and light cart and drove to the allotment in eleven days with his eldest son. Nothing but surveyors' pegs showed that human beings had ever passed that way, while dense forest covered the land.

For a moment the young Scotsman doubted his wisdom in throwing up a well-paid job at home, but the next he had made up his mind to tackle the task. Soon he had hacked down some timber and built a shack.

But the luck was against him. In 1914 he had 250 acres under crop as the result of nine-and-a-half years, and was in debt to the Agricultural Bank to the tune of £1,000.

All hopes of reward for past labor and of success for the future were based on that year's crop. That season Western Australia had the worst drought its wheat areas had ever experienced.

Then the luck changed. Everything went well with him. Next harvest was an abundant one, and he was able to re-establish his credit with the bank. He has now 3,000 acres of magnificent land, 4,000 of which are under crop; he has fine flocks of sheep, good homesteads, and well-equipped farms.

Beating the Bachelor.

In Sicily the fir tree is unknown as a Christmas adjunct, but the very indicrous custom of "beating the bachelor" is observed by the women. All of the unmarried men in the village are driven into the church after mass by the outnumbering women and run about the sacred edifice and beaten until they declare (often falsely) that they will wed ere another Christmas come around.

Venetian Glass.

Venetian glass is distinguished by its exquisite thinness and fineness of quality—Tiffany glass being its only rival. Compared with Bohemian glass, which is also prized for bric-a-brac, its quality is much superior, although Bohemian glass sometimes rivals it in coloring and decorations which are more gorgeous but not as refined.

The Bright Side.

The warden of Ohio penitentiary says that this one is true. Recently a negro prisoner, in for life, was brought before him and in the conversation the warden said: "Why, Rastus, you are in for life, aren't you?" With a broad grin the negro replied philosophically, "Oh, no, warden, just from now on."

The management of Riverside and Riverview cemeteries have kindly donated a large plot in each cemetery, and this piece of land will be looked after by the local Oddfellows, and will eventually be known as the "Oddfellows' Memorial Plot." A committee has the work in hand and are making all necessary arrangements.

Islanders Beat Tamworth 7-3.

Wolfe Island and Tamworth came together in the first of their home series Friday afternoon at Wolfe Island to decide which will go in quest of further honors in the intermediate O.B.A.A. playoffs with the result that Wolfe Island handed the visitors a 7-3 beating. The score was thought to be 8-3 by many, but Umpire Sullivan ruled that the run which was supposed to have been scored in the eighth inning by Stebbin, did not count because he was not over the plate when the runner at second was tagged for the third out. However, the win gives the Island a good jump for the honors between the two teams and they will battle it out on Wednesday at Tamworth, where the second game of the series will be played between the two teams.

THE EARNINGS TO BE LARGER

North Bay, Aug. 23.—Sir Henry Thornton, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, in speaking before a banquet jointly tendered him by the members of the City Council, the Board of Trade and the Rotary Club last night, intimated that the earnings of the Canadian National Railways would not fall behind the net earnings of last year, but, on the contrary, would be substantially greater.

"I would like to correct an erroneous impression which apparently was made as a result of an address given by me in Calgary recently. Then the impression seemed to make headway that the Canadian National Railway would have an operative deficit of $13,000,000. That was not what I said. What I said was that the gross revenue would be $12,000,000 or $13,000,000 less than what it was last year, but that we would probably have that much out of our expenses. It is altogether likely that our earnings will be substantially more than those of last year, but that we will not be able to get our objective of $30,000,000 which we had set for this year, owing to the decrease in traffic movement."

PRINCE SAILS FOR AMERICA

Southampton, Eng., Aug. 25.—In holiday attire, with flags flying and bunting waving, the giant liner Berengaria, with the Prince of Wales on board, sailed for the United States at 2.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The Prince is on his way to visit his ranch in Alberta, Canada.

The quays were lined with large crowds of townspeople, who waved enthusiastic farewells to the departing vessel, but there was no response from the royal quarters where the prince was sleeping peacefully, having gone to bed for a much-needed rest immediately after he went on board at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Determined there should be as little ceremony as possible in connection with his sailing, his Royal Highness late Friday slipped quietly out of London by automobile, spent a few hours at the Isle of Wight, about twenty miles from here, boarded the Berengaria almost without being noticed and immediately went to bed.

NO U.S. VICTORY FOR THE WETS

The American "Wet" Press promised their readers that the National Political Conventions would at least weaken on the Prohibition issue. But all four candidates—Republican and Democratic nominees for President and Vice President—are drys, and each platform pledged its party to law-enforcement.

The Democratic Vice President is Governor Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, an active Prohibition speaker and worker.

SPORTS AN ANTI-PROHIBITION.

Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American Baseball Association, speaking in 1923 said :—

"The season was a record-breaker. Prohibition has been the greatest blessing baseball ever enjoyed. The passing of the saloon increased our patronage wonderfully. Regardless of the merits of the 18th Amendment, it is a great business booster for us."

AUSTRALIA ENQUIRING.

The Business Men's Efficiency League, of Sydney, Australia, recently sent a questionaire to 1000 of the largest and most important commercial institutions of the United States as to the effect of Prohibition. The League reports that 90 per cent. of the replies were enthusiastic in its praise.

THE POOR BOOTLEGGER !

The Toronto Bureau of Industrial Research looked up 20 houses where illicit sale was habitually carried on ; and where 26 persons were engaged in the traffic. Seven of these were women who conducted houses of ill fame. 16 out of the 26 were of Foreign birth or extraction. Only three claimed they could not get other work to do—the remaining 23 admitted they just wanted "easy money."

MOTOR TRAGEDIES.

There are about 300,000 motor cars and trucks owned in Ontario. It is estimated that over a million from the States enter the Province during the year. Because of the congestion of such vehicles, accidents and fatalities are startlingly on the increase.

1923 "Wet" Government Control, Montreal, had almost twice as many people killed by automobiles, as Toronto under O.T.A., and Toronto has almost twice as many cars as Montreal.

Do motor owners want the legalized sale of liuor, to make our highways doubly unsafe for travel ?

"OLD SKEESICKS" ALL RIGHT

May Be Somewhat Odd in Character, but Not Infrequently Has Heart of Pure Gold.

"Old Skeesicks" is what the boys call him, perhaps because he uses clothes that are top of the best and talks sometimes about the duty of being careful about spending money unnecessarily. "Old Skeesicks" they whisper when they see and speak of, and I sometimes think he hears what the thoughtless boys and maybe thoughtless men say about him. I've just smiles and goes on about his work.

I saw "Old Skeesicks" one night recently coming out of a home where things are not going very well just now. Father sick, mother worried to get things her little folks need to make them comfortable and bills crowding hard, now that the winner of the daily bread is laid up. A bit curious to know more about "Old Skeesicks" visit, I slipped over after supper and found them all cheery, no clouds in sight ; and they told me with a glad light in their eyes that the good old farmer man had got better much, more or less, of good things to eat and he had told them if they needed it he would let them have money to tide over the hard spell.

Since then I have thought of some other things "Old Skeesicks" has done, and somehow I wish no one ever would speak disrespectfully of our old neighbor again. Trips to town after a man for Tony, sitting up all night with Perry when he was sick enough to die, ploughing all day in the raw November wind for an old farmer because he had a pleasant word for him, scarcely put one foot before the other, and always so good and kind and pleasant to meet.

"Old Skeesicks ?" Boys, let's never call him that, and let's be a bit more careful how we say things about other folks anyway. We cannot always tell what is back of the old clothes and the rough outside. Under the tattered outerwear may beat the truest, kindest heart ever given a man. If "Old Skeesicks" is a mite over careful about the use of money, it's only that he may do good with it. He was brought up in the school of economy. His heart is all right.—Edgar L. Vincent in Farm Life.

We call attention to the announcement of Dr. Ray, Eye Specialist, of Belleville, on page one, who is coming to the Campbell House, Napanee, every Friday afternoon from 12.30 to 4.30. First visit, Friday afternoon July 25th.

Lennox Fair and Old Boys' Reunion, Sept. 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th.

WALLPAPERS WINDOW SHADES

Dance at Adolphustown Wednesday evening, Glen Island orchestra. 39-bp

Lower School Certificates for pupils of the Napanee Collegiate Institute and for the county pupils who were candidates at the recent examinations, may be obtained from Mr. J. G. Fennell, Sec.-Treas., Board of Education, at his office in the Town Hall.

On Wednesday afternoon two cars, both going fairly fast, met on the corner of Bridge and West streets. When the smoke cleared away, both cars were badly wrecked and Mr. Louis Fish was on his way to Kingston Hospital in the ambulance, with a broken hip.

The remains of the late Samuel Blewett, of Toronto, were brought to Napanee on Monday and the funeral took place from the Canadian National station on arrival of the train. The late Mr. Blewitt, who was a former well-known resident of Napanee, and a brother of Mr. Geo. A. Blewitt, died very suddenly in Toronto from heart trouble.

Mr. Wm. Goodman, Sr., a well-known and respected resident of North Fredericksburgh, passed away on Saturday at the advanced age of 84 years. He leaves three sons and one daughter, William Goodman, Sr., on the homestead, Harry Goodman, of Woodstock, John G. Goodman, of Lethbridge, Alta., and Mrs. McGuade, Picton. The funeral took place on Monday at Bethany church.

"Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you, 1 Pet. 5-7 ; "Thine eyes shall see the King in His beauty, they shall behold the land that is very far off," Isa. 33-17 ; "Delight thyself also in the Lord ; and He shall give thee the desires of thine heart," Ps. 37-4 ; "Strong in faith, giving glory to God ; being fully persuaded that, what He hath promised, He was able also to perform," Rom. 4-20-21.

Father of Love ,Thou guide and friend,
O lead us gently on ;
Until the final time shall end,
And heavenly peace be won.

A BIBLE LOVER.

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, Aug. 9th, at the Odessa parsonage by Rev. Mr. Dixon, when Luella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Woodcock, of Elm Tree, became the bride of Mr. Minor Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Knight, of Elm Tree. The bride looked very becoming in her wedding dress of sky blue taffeta and travelled in a navy blue suit. The bridesmaid, Mrs. Stewart Knight, was attired in an old rose satin dress and travelled in a navy blue suit. The groom was supported by his brother, Stewart Knight, of Kaladar. After a long motor trip the bridal party returned to Elm Tree.

WONDERLAND

WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY

Tom Buckingham, who directed the screen version of Lincoln J. Carter's melo-drama "The Arizona Express," the William Fox picture. The melodrama is a pithy, thrilling cross-section of life, contends Mr. Buckingham. Its thrills and exciting situations are allied both to the emotional and physical developement and expression. The ancient Greek dramatists packed their plays with thrilling action.

Also a special Comedy.

FRIDAY and SATURDAY

Strongheart in "THE LOVE MASTER." Fight, love, romance, adventure, in the land of eternal snows, and Strongheart, the Wonder Dog, king of his line, a mighty figure of thrill and throb and sheer amazement, with Lillian Rich.

Also a good Comedy.

MONDAY and TUESDAY

Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount picture, produced by Sam Wood, is a picturization of Charlton Andrew's adaptation of Alfred Savoir's celebrated French farce, "BLUEBEARD'S 8TH WIFE." It is said to afford Miss Swanson one of the strongest rolls of her screen career, and, while women admirers will relish most perhaps, provides her with ample opportunities for the display of amazing gowns.

Also a 2-reel Comedy.

The September issue of Rod and Gun in Canada will appeal to every sportsman. A canoe trip through the Chain Lakes from Parry Sound to Shubenacadie, by R. G .Urquahart describes one of the most alluring trips that can be made anywhere in the Maritimes. The Four of Us, by B. Lonsdale, is the story of a perfect two weeks' hunting trip, while Bonnycastle Dale gives an interesting account of How the Slim Wriggling Eel is Taken in Winter on the Atlantic Coast. Raymond Thompson's story of the frozen north, entitled The Fur Cache, is one with an unusually good plot. Mildred Low introduces the reader to a very interesting group of people, The Guides of Algonquin, and Martin Hunter narrates in his usual vivid style in Circulating. All the regular departments are up to their usual standard of excellence, and aid in providing good, all round reading in this number of the magazine.

How High Do Birds Fly?

This appears to be still an unsettled question in ornithology, and recently a scientific institution requested airmen, skilled in meteorological exploration to observe the heights at which birds are found. At present it is believed that birds generally do not rise more than about 1,500 feet above the ground, although occasionally they attain an elevation of between 6,000 and 7,000 feet.

OUR TYPE OF PEOPLE

SIR BERTRAM WINDLE DOES NOT FEAR "ETHNIC HORRORS."

Former Assertion That Anglo-Saxons Were the Salt of the Earth Has Been Somewhat Outmoded by the More Recent and Fashionable Nordic Pretensions. But Nordics Are Not Only Pebbles on the Beach.

The former assertion that the Anglo-Saxons were the salt of the earth has been somewhat outmoded nowadays by the more recent and more fashionable Nordic pretensions. Nowadays, if you are inclined to be in any degree fair haired, fair skinned, fair eyed, long limbed, long nosed and long headed, you may regard yourself as a Nordic, puff out your chest like a human pouter pigeon, and boast of being a member of the world's dominant race, man at his highest and best, the white man par excellence.

If you wish to display this modish superiority complex you must look on all other white men, especially if they have dark hair and swarthy skins, even if they be as good-looking as Valentino and as clever as Einstein; and especially indeed if they have round heads, as inferior, a lower order of humans entirely, members of submerged peoples.

This belief in racial superiority is not new. It has frequently manifested itself in different forms. The Romans had it badly. The Jews, of course, have always been God's chosen people. The Englishman at one time could kick traditionally, with one hand tied behind his back, six Frenchmen, eight Italians and ten Russians. Then the Germans had it worst of all and tried to tell the world, with unfortunate results for themselves when they were not quite able to prove it.

Then along came the Nordic claims as its latest phase. Madison Grant, in a book published during the war called "The Passing of the Great Race," set out the proofs, from his point of view, of the dominance of the Nordic or, roughly, men of the northern European race in history, and bewailed the fact that the race was passing. According to Madison Grant "the little dark man" will be the final winner over the tall blond northerner, for the former stands on the sidelines while the latter goes off to war to fight and slay and exterminate his breed.

Madison Grant's claims are wide. According to him, it is not going too far to say, almost every great European who has ever lived was a Nordic: the Roman patricians, Greeks like Pericles, men like Dante and Michael Angelo, and so on. His view is entirely an aristocratic one. Democracy, he argues and declares, is simply the rising to power of the submerged and inferior classes, racially. The whole argument is aimed at the American people. He warns them of the fate of the southerner, a Nordic, since the abolition of slavery made him work in the fields under climatic conditions which were fatal to the Nordic type; and of the New Englander, also a Nordic, descendant of the high, adventurous, fine types who came out on the Mayflower and subsequently, who are being driven off the streets of New York and Boston and from the farms of Maine and Massachusetts by the swarms of more recent immigrants of Alpine and Mediterranean stock.

The intelligence tests conducted in the American army during the war helped to bolster the Nordic claims to supremacy. Did they not prove that the highest intelligence was possessed by the men from the states on the Pacific coast, the Nordics, the adventurers who had had the pioneering courage of the race to cross the mountains and carve a career out of the wilderness and who were least mixed with the later and lower types of immigrant? Did not the tests show that the Canadians, the Britons, the Irish, the Scandinavians, the Germans, all of them coming under this fashionable Nordic classification, were much superior mentally to the Greeks, the Italians, the Russians and others who now broadly classed by the Madison Grant school as either Alpines or Mediterraneans?

It might be remembered that the Nordics, Alpines and Mediterraneans are the three divisions into which Grant puts at least the western European, that is excluding the Mongolian to be found in eastern Europe. They are not so much distinct races with him as sub-races or branches of the Caucasian or white race generally. The Nordics are, roughly, the inhabitants of northern Europe, of whom the purest specimens are the Scandinavians. The Vikings were Nordics, of course, and so were the Normans. So is the tow-headed Highlander of Scotland and the fair Celt of Ireland, for that matter, according to Grant. The Nordics are distinguished physically in a general way by being long skulled, fair haired, fair skinned, blue or grey eyed, long legged, and with long, straight noses. The Alpines are, roughly the inhabitants of the central European belt. They are in the main the submerged peasant peoples. Their physical characteristics are round heads, dark eyes, dark hair and a stocky build. The Mediterraneans, southern Europeans, are, like the Nordics, long skulled, but they are unlike them, dark haired, dark eyed, swarthy of skin, of smaller stature and of lighter physique.

These three peoples have mental and spiritual characteristics as different as their physical appearance. The Nordic, of course, is as superior in these as he is in looks.

It must not be supposed that the three peoples are to be three distinct and well-defined belts. There has been much intermarriage and intermingling.

There was intermarriage, and the normal type predominated. Where you get considerable intermixture and intermarriage the tendency is for the abnormalities to disappear."

In the United States and Canada, Sir Bertram explained, there was a great intermingling of people who did not belong to the Indo-European races, which was his designation of the inhabitants of western Europe with the exception of the Finns and the Basques who lived along the Pyrenees, and which also, by the way, included the true Hindoos and Persians. Into Canada and the United States were coming numbers of the semi-Asiatic races, Slavs, Ruthenes, Ukrainians, Galicians, Poles, Hungarians. These people had originally swept from the Ural mountains across the Kirghis steppes and towards the great plain of Europe. Vienna had been the bulwark against which they broke. John Sobieski was the barrier that stayed their advance. But there had been peaceful penetration further. One of the troubles, in fact, the cause of the troubles, in the Balkans to-day, was the clashing of these different races.

When Sir Bertram Windle in the nineties was running for the Birmingham school board speeches in Irish in his ward were the order of the day. But these Irish people were the first generation still living of those who had been driven from their native land by the famine sufferings. How long their cultural isolation would continue was a problematical matter. In one or two generations Sir Bertram thought, their children having gone to school and learnt the English language, their isolation would disappear and absorption would begin.

Once when Sir Bertram was running for the Birmingham school board, we was looking down the voters' list and he came on the name Murphy. He decided to visit what should prove a supporter. But great was the aforesaid Murphy's indignation at being taken for a Roman Catholic Irishman when he was really a Protestant Englishman!

In the southern states Sir Bertram Windle thought that in the course of time a distinct type would develop. They were scarcely a white man's country. It was too hot for the white man. It was all right for him so long as he had slaves to do his bidding while he could sit around and boss. But with the disappearance of slavery and the necessity for the white man working came the deterioration of the white man because of unsuitable climate conditions.

Madison Grant has this interesting thing to say of the southern conditions: "Virginia is in the same latitude as North Africa, and south of this line no blonds have ever been able to survive in their full vigor, chiefly because the actinic rays of the sun are the same regardless of other climatic conditions. These rays beat heavily on the Nordic race and disturb their nervous system, wherever the white man ventures too far from the cold and foggy north." He declares that among the lower classes in the south the increasing proportion of "crackers" and "poor whites" are symptoms which prove his contention.

In this connection, the influence of climate on race, Sir Bertram Windle pointed out the difference between the lie of the mountains in Europe and North America. In Europe they ran from east to west, affording a barrier to the north winds and making the south of Europe habitable for their protection. In North America the main ranges all ran from north to south, allowing the sweep of the north winds and the production of a harder climate to a greater distance south. This would have the effect of providing conditions which would breed a people with northern characteristics much further, south than was possible in Europe. He thought that Canada at least would develop a northern race whose physical traits he could not define but who would be sturdy in physique and mentality. The general history of mankind showed that where it was necessary to work hard for a livelihood there was produced a sturdy race.

By the way, Madison Grant thinks that the finest and purest type of a Nordic community outside of Europe will develop in northwest Canada and on the Pacific coast of the United States.

"But when reasoning that a sturdy type will develop in the north," continued Sir Bertram Windle, "you have to discount the modern tendency to flock to the cities. There is a saying in London that there is no Londoner of the third generation. In Birmingham, the English city with I know best, you had a constant city population. My impression is that if in the north here the population worked on the land they would produce a fine, tall, powerful race. What effect city life will have to the race, such city life as you have here, it is hard to say.

"Conditions are different from those in the old-world cities. The standards of living are higher. There is not the overcrowding. You have practically no slums. The slums of Birmingham are appalling. You have no such slums here."

Prof. Windle told of a visit that he paid to a Birmingham school some years ago in a slum section of the city. He remarked to the headmaster, a bright man, a Jew, by the way: "You've got a pretty rough lot here."

"Yes," the man replied, "there isn't a boy in this school who hasn't now or who hasn't had a near relative in prison."

"They look a pretty healthy lot, anyway," rejoined Dr. Windle.

"The rest are dead," retorted the man. Which the visitor thought was one way of illustrating the survival of the fittest.

Sir Bertram Windle did not agree with Madison Grant in his definition of the Nordics. During the ten or fifteen centuries that succeeded the Bronze Age, according to Sir Bertram, a complex racial blend took place in Europe. This blend which resulted in these blonde, long-headed people was not a pure race but was of composite origin long before the so-called Alpines came at all. When the latter did come from Asia, from the eastern mountains, they drove a wedge of broad heads or round heads right through the heart of the long heads separating them as they do to this day into the northern and southern Europeans. So that Sir Bertram Windle looked on the Nordics and the Mediterraneans, both long-headed peoples, as coming from the same original European blend and not as separate and distinct peoples as Madison Grant does. Any physical differences which they might possess now were simply due to centuries of different climatic and living conditions.

Prof. Roland Dixon of Harvard University who has recently written "The racial history of mankind," took this view, according to Prof. Windle. Dixon believed that the blending into the so-called Nordics had taken place in the Baltic basin of two distinct types during the New Stone Age.

Dixon pointed out that the bulk of the Germans, the so-called "blond beasts," had really no claim to being Nordics at all, that the claim of the domineering Prussian to represent the long-headed Nordic was totally false, both they and the Bavarians being in the main Alpines.

In the middle eighties when Germany began to evolve the "blond beast" and "shining armor" kultur which resulted in the late war Virchow, a great German savant, undertook to make a census of the hair and eyes of all the school children in the German empire. Soon it became evident that the results were not as expected. The census was proving the Germans were not of one but of many types, that they were not by any means the tall, strong, blond race of heroes which the kulturists maintained they were, that in fact a large proportion were scarcely distinguishable from the people of Switzerland, Belgium and France, and that another large proportion were very like the much despised Slav. This would never do. So the Germans with characteristic action stopped the census but continued to utterly false blond contention which the census was intended to prove but did not. Which goes to show, Prof. Windle remarked with a smile, that there is politics even in ethnology. He considers that the term "square head" could not fairly be applied so widely to the Germans unless their squareheadedness was obvious even to those who were not ethnologists.

It all went to prove that it was very difficult to set up hard and fast rules about racial admixtures.

What will be the effect of assimilating the semi-Asiatic peoples who are arriving on the North American continent, if they are assimilated?" one asked.

"Will they lower what will be the eventual standard of the people here?"

"It is difficult to say," replied Sir Bertram Windle. "So many factors enter. Not only is there the standard of living to which I referred but there are other factors such as the peace that prevails on this continent, not to mention prohibition. I would not say that assimilation will produce a lowering of the standard—I should say that it would result in a different race. There can be no set rule against the eternal question of whether education or environment is the more important thing. These people aren't deficient in intelligence but they are deficient in education. After some generations of education I do not see why culturally they should not be assimilated without hurting the standard. Of course, their assimilation will have an effect on the physical appearance of the race, on the hair, the eyes and the shape of the head, which one cannot foretell."

So far as prohibition was concerned, Sir Bertram Windle declared that it was impossible to generalize. The light wines and lager beers of western Europe did not seem to have any effect on the race. Neither did the drinking in the British Isles."

"At any rate," concluded Sir Bertram Windle, "the Nordics are not the only pebble on the beach even if they should die out. Foch was a Calabrian. He was not a Nordic. Yet he is of considerable note. Napoleon was not a Nordic. Claiming that greatness resides only in the so-called Nordic is nonsense. The great genius that Europe has produced sprang from Nordic soil is like the German contention during the war that Shakespeare was a German."

All in the Meaning.

Mrs. Peck: Gh, Henry, what does the word "contract" mean?

Mr. Peck: It means to make smaller, my dear. For instance, heat expands and cold contracts.

Mrs. Peck: Now it's all right. Harry told me he was contracting some heavy debts, and I was nervous till you explained it.—Answers.

Brains of Lower Animals.

All animals have some form of brain and nervous system, which in the horse and other higher animals approximates the human brain. As compared with the human brain, those of animals are deficient in reasoning power but in other ways their intelligence is very marked.

Horace Greeley's Philosophy.

Those who discharge promptly and faithfully all their duties to those who still live in the flesh, can have but little time for poking and peering into the life beyond the grave. Better to attend to each world in its proper order.—Horace Greeley.

Canadian Boat-song.

Under the above heading, the Edinburgh Scotsman, in discussing the departure of the Hebrideans, published the following song with the words, "From the Gaelic—Published in 1829," and says:

"How the heart of the Highland exile throbs with love for his native isles, and for the home of his fathers, is beautifully described in the words of an unknown authority."

Listen to me, as when ye heard our father
Sing long ago the song of other shores—
Listen to me, and then in chorus gather
All your deep voices, as ye pull your oars.

CHORUS.

Fair these broad meads—these hoary woods are grand;
But we are exiles from our fathers' land.

From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas—
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

We never shall tread the fancy-haunted valley,
Where 'tween the dark hills creeps the small clear stream,
In arms around the patriarch banner rally,
Nor see the moon on royal tombstones gleam.

When the bold kindred, in the time long vanish'd,
Conquer'd the soil and fortified the keep—
No seer foretold the children would be banish'd,
That a degenerate lord might boast his sheep.

Come, foreign rage—let Discord burst in slaughter!
O then for clansmen true and stern claymore—
The hearts that would have given their blood like water,
Beat heavily beyond the Atlantic roar.

Fair these broad meads—these hoary woods are grand;
But we are exiles from our fathers' land.

Patients in a Glass Case.

Guy's Hospital, in London, Eng., has installed a hermetically-sealed glass chamber in which patients needing oxygen are placed for several days, so that they can breathe air containing double the amount of oxygen found in the ordinary atmosphere of the ward.

Want Mothers.

"Babies cry for the same reason as young lambs cry," says a well-known doctor; "they want their mothers."

Mental Depression Common.

Comparatively few persons, if the feeble minded and a large number of the insane are excepted, are entirely free from the tendency to bouts of more or less mental depression. The more intellectual portion of mankind is indeed more prone to this kind of mental malaise, or spiritual equivalent of sea sickness, than the less "brainy" majority.

Hospitality.

Hospitality must be for service and not for show, or it pulls down the host. The brave soul rates itself too high to value itself by the splendor of its table and draperies. It gives what it hath, and all it hath, but the royal majesty can lend a better grace to oat cakes and fair water than belong to city feast.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The Outsider

By FLORENCE WARDEN

Author of "The House on the Marsh," "Something in the City," "No. 3, The Square," "The Lovely Mrs. Pemberton," "Our Widow," Etc.

She was exceedingly indignant at the persecution to which Dick had been subjected; and self-interest jumping with generosity, she was quite ready to go to Paris with Lorimer and to help unmask Dr. Folgate.

While she went indoors to give directions to the nurse with whom she had to leave her child, and to prepare for the journey, Lorimer went to the hotel where the Basings were still staying, and in a day long enough to meet the whole family coming out for a walk.

Lady Basing was very gracious, and on learning that Dick Desborough was in Paris, and was ill, she said that they were thinking of going there themselves, and that she should call and make inquiries about him.

"Poor fellow!" she said, "how I pity him! All alone, with no kind woman's hand to smooth his pillow."

Jean Basing was interested enough to guess, by the gloomy look which instantly appeared on Lorimer's face, that this was a bad kind.

"Perhaps, mamma," she suggested, "Mr. Desborough is engaged to be married by this time. Is he, Mr. Seeley?"

"Yes," said Lorimer briefly.

And Lady Basing's enthusiasm began to fade away.

"Tell Miss Bird," whispered Jean to Lorimer, when he had bidden them good-bye, and was going back to fetch Mrs. Parkin from her hotel, "that she is not to pass through Ostend on her honeymoon without coming to see us." Then, as she saw his lip quiver, she added, in a lower voice still: "Poor fellow! I'm so sorry!"

Lorimer winced, but he only said, "I'll give Miss Bird your message."

And then he hurried away, and half an hour later he was at the railway station with Mrs. Parkin, on the way to Paris.

Long as the journey was, the time seemed to pass quickly, for she was interested was Mrs. Parkin in the story Lorimer had to tell her, and so many questions had she to ask about it. He took care to telegraph to Carrie at the first stopping-place, and the result of this precaution was that, when the train arrived in Paris, she was waiting at the station.

Her face was full of the deepest anxiety. Mrs. Parkin, who assumed all the consequence of a well-to-do widow, with some gratitude at the same time for the respect paid to these claims, greeted Carrie with straightforward heartiness as soon as the girl came up to her.

"I'm Mrs. Parkin," she exclaimed at once. "And I've come to help show up that fellow Folgate. His story is all nonsense. I've never seen him since. Mr. Parkin's dead."

Carrie listened with much interest, but with little surprise. She had felt convinced of the truth some time ago.

"Thank you," she said. "Poor Dick will be very glad when you've come, if he's allowed to see you. But he is a prisoner at present. And she turned to Lorimer. "I've been to the flat twice," she said, in a tremulous voice, "last night and again to-day, but I could not get in. The doctor himself met me at the door and refused to let me in. He said it would be serious for Dick if I forced myself upon him. And I dared not insist in face of that. But I want you to go with me and find out if it's true."

With anxious hearts, trying to keep up each other's spirits by saying that Dick was in no danger, they all got into a fiacre and drove to the house. Lorimer went upstairs first, the two women following him slowly.

They stopped short on the stairs as the door was opened in answer to Lorimer's ring, and the French housekeeper appeared, with a face full of alarm.

"I wish to see Mr. Desborough. I must see him," said Lorimer, with authority.

The woman stared at him and shook her head.

"Come in, then," said she. "And you, ladies, if you wish. But Mr. Desborough is dead."

CHAPTER XIX.

Lorimer Seeley reeled back under the shock of the announcement of his friend's death. He had started with the fact of poor Dick's illness being in any way serious, and had believed that it was a fiction kept up by Dr. Folgate for his own ends.

Dick Desborough had indeed had nothing of the fragile appearance, the feeble voice, the languid manner of those of whom it is natural to expect that they may die young. Robust, even coarse of physique, loud of voice, boisterous of manner, he had seemed even exceptionally sure of a long life in the ordinary course of things.

Although his habits of life had of late been by no means careful, Lorimer could not understand his having thrown his last breath so early, and dark suspicions instantly filled his mind as he recovered himself, and said sternly to the woman at the door,—

"Who was with him?"

Before Madame Bertin could answer, Carrie and Mrs. Parkin, who were on the staircase below, and who had not heard the woman's words, began to move slowly upstairs. Lorimer heard their footsteps, and, running hastily down, told them what he had just heard.

Carrie was too much shocked to speak: she could not believe the terrible news.

"It's some story of Dr. Folgate's," said she, in a tremulous whisper, "to keep us out. Let us go up—go in."

But Mrs. Parkin, whose recollection of the tragic death of Dick's uncle was still too fresh for her to be able to bear another scene of the same kind, drew away, shuddering, white and half fainting.

"You go," said she, hoarsely. "Leave me. I—I can't bear it. I can't! I can't!"

Carrie did not like to leave her, for she seemed to be scarcely conscious, and clung to the girl for support. Lorimer, therefore, was left to enter the flat by himself.

He repeated his former question to the housekeeper, who was much less voluble than women of her class usually are.

"No one was with the poor young gentleman, sir. He slept alone, and we found him dead in the morning," said she, when they were in the vestibule with the door shut behind them.

"And Dr. Folgate, where was he?"

"He was sleeping out here on a chair-bedstead, sir."

"And you? Where do you sleep?"

"In a room next to the kitchen at the other end of the flat."

Lorimer made her a sign to open the door of the salon, before which she was standing. She did so, and he passed through, and entered the bedroom where poor Dick lay dead. He could scarcely control his emotion. The very fact that Dick had been a rough, brusque fellow, without much sensitiveness or refinement, seemed to make the tragedy of his early death more shocking, more awful. And the more he thought, the longer he looked at the lifeless mask, which seemed so unlike the living face he remembered, the more convinced did Lorimer become that there was some mystery attached to the death, and the more enraged did he become at thought of the tortures the poor fellow had been made to suffer through the deceit of Dr. Folgate.

Then the remembrance flashed into his mind of the two letters—the one to himself and the other to Miss Basing—which Carrie had written and which lay behind her in the flat, and with the certainty he felt that the artful doctor would have opened and read them, there was forced upon him the startling conclusion that the information afforded by Carrie's letter to Jean Basing of her attention to trace Mrs. Parkin and find out the truth might have led to Dick's tragic end.

But in that case his death must have been brought about by the doctor! Scarcely had he reached this point in the dreadful thoughts which now possessed him, when Lorimer, standing by the bedside of his dead friend, became suddenly conscious that he was not alone in the room. A shadow seemed to envelop the body; and turning quickly Lorimer found himself face to face with Dr. Folgate, who, in an attitude significant of the most abject distress, stood with clasped hands and bowed head, with his back to the subdued light that came through the drawn blind.

"Ah!" sighed out the doctor, with an air of acute agitation that enraged his listener beyond words; "this is the saddest thing that has ever happened to me. The loss of my young friend—"

With a brusque gesture Lorimer interrupted him and led the way out of the room and into the salon adjoining.

He felt that he could not bear these sickening manifestations of a sorrow which he was certain were only assumed, in the very presence of his dead friend.

In the next room, with the door closed, he stood up, tall and stiff and straight, before the cringing doctor, who preferred to appear so bent with affliction that he was unable to raise his eyes to the young man's face.

"This is very sudden," said he, sharply.

"Terribly sudden. In all my experience—"

"How did it happen "

"It was apoplexy, undoubtedly. He had had a slight seizure also on the yesterday morning—as no doubt you have heard. And he must have had another during last night. When the housekeeper went into the room this morning she found him lying on his face, quite dead."

"Ay! Suffocated, then?"

"Yes."

"Very strange. You heard nothing during during the night to lead you to suppose he was ill? You slept, I believe, near enough to be within hearing if he called out?"

"I heard nothing whatever."

"I shall fetch a medical man from the neighborhood to make an examination—"

"You appear to forget that I am a qualified physician—"

"I forget nothing," retorted Lorimer, shortly. "He has made a will in your favor, I understand, Dr. Folgate?"

"If he has, I was not aware of the fact," replied the doctor, coldly.

Lorimer laughed in his face.

"Do you dare to suggest—" cried Dr. Folgate, suddenly changing his tone, and speaking with real passion, which Lorimer infinitely preferred to his former airs of deep affliction.

The other would not let him finish his sentence.

"I suggest nothing," said he. "I shall have inquiry made into the cause of my friend's death in the first place."

"And in the second place," interrupted Dr. Folgate, in clear, decisive tones, "you shall come with me to the office of the solicitor whom poor Desborough made me send for, and you shall make me an apology for your gross behaviour when you know the circumstances of the case."

"Oh, as to the circumstances, Perhaps I know more than you suppose," said Lorimer. "I have just been to Ostend"—the doctor started slightly—"and I have brought back with me a lady who can throw some light upon your treatment of Desborough."

"What do you mean?"

"You tortured the poor fellow by telling him a parcel of lies about this woman."

"Prove it, prove it if you can," said the doctor, lightly. "You can't bring accusations of that sort without proof."

"Miss Bird and I can both bear witness to the fact."

"Miss Bird and you! And don't you think that you will take my word sooner than the word of a young man and woman who have been travelling about together? I am sorry to throw it you like: it will be characteristic of you to make a disturbance in the very rooms where your dead friend is lying!"

Lorimer restrained himself by a great effort. It suddenly flashed into his mind that the doctor was afraid of truth in what Dr. Folgate suggested, that a medical man of his standing and stately manner would stand a better chance of being believed anywhere than he and Carrie would; and that the charitable world would put the worst construction upon the wild trip to the Continent which they and poor Dick had taken together.

Before he could speak, before indeed he had decided what line to follow with the rogue before him, Dr. Folgate suddenly opened another subject.

"By-the-bye," said he, "may I ask how you came to be so sure, that Desborough had made a will—a will in my favor?"

Lorimer hesitated to answer. He could not acknowledge by any regular means by which the news had come to him, and there was a pause, which was broken at last by the doctor himself. A light had come into his face.

"Perhaps," said he, "your friend Miss Bird found out that Desborough made a will—"

"She was with him after he had made it," said Lorimer, quickly.

"And did she learn from him that he made it in my favor? Well, if so, I'm sure I shall be very much pleased to hear it."

"You left the flat with the lawyer after the will was signed," said Lorimer.

"But I neither asked nor learned anything about its provisions," retorted the doctor. "And you shall be satisfied of it once. Come with me to Mr. Bankes' office and hear the facts from his own lips. You can find out from him at the same time to certify the cause of death."

Lorimer said nothing in answer, but he followed Dr. Folgate out of the flat with a nod of assent.

To his great annoyance everything turned out exactly as the doctor wished. The physician who was called in certified the cause of Dick's death to be suffocation, and agreed with the theory that it was probably the effect of a second attack of apoplexy following that of the previous day.

Mr. Bankes, the English solicitor, whom they next visited, was a little dry-mannered man who looked Lorimer over with a keen eye as Dr. Folgate introduced him in the following manner:

"I have brought this gentleman to see you, Mr. Bankes, as he has accused me—"

"I did not make accusation," interrupted Lorimer, quietly.

"Well, he has asserted that Mr. Richard Desborough, who, I am sorry to say, was found dead in his bed this morning, Mr. Bankes looked interested, but did not interrupt—"made a will in my favor before he died; and he implies, as plainly as he can do without making an actual accusation, that the will was dictated by me. Now, Mr. Bankes, I shall be much obliged if you will kindly put him in possession of the facts."

"Certainly," said Mr. Bankes. And turning to Lorimer he went on, in the same dry tone: "This gentleman came to me yesterday morning with a message from Mr. Desborough to the effect that he wished me to draw up a will for him."

"Was that all I said, Mr. Bankes?"

"Nearly all, I think, except to answer a few questions as to who Mr. Desborough was, and so forth."

"And then I went away? And you saw nothing more of me until after the making and signing of the will?"

"That is so."

"Was I present in the room when the will was made?"

"No, you were not."

"When I met you in the flat, before you left, did I make any inquiries about the will or ask to see it?"

"No. We talked about other matters, and I left you at the corner of the street."

Dr. Folgate turned triumphantly to Lorimer.

"Now, Mr. Seeley, are you prepared to apologize to me for your implied insinuations?"

"No," said Lorimer, stoutly, "Not until I have seen the will in question."

Perhaps, Mr. Bankes, you will allow this gentleman to have a sight of it."

"There is no hurry for that," said Lorimer, quickly, "I had no intention of asking such a thing so soon."

"There can be no objection to your seeing it, Mr. Folgate's seeing it either," said Mr. Bankes in the same dry tone as before. "In fact, I think it will be better for you both to see it. Here it is."

He went to the other side of the room, took down a tin box, unlocked it, and produced from it one of the document in question, with poor Dick Desborough's quavering signature at the bottom.

As Lorimer would not look at it, Dr. Folgate took upon himself to ask the lawyer to read it aloud.

After the usual preamble, the testator went on to say that, in view of the fact that he wished to make some provision for the lady to whom he was engaged to marry, Miss Caroline Bird, he bequeathed to her an income of three hundred pounds a year so long as she remained unmarried. He bequeathed his gold watch and chain to his friend, Lorimer Seeley, together with his latest dressing-case and the sum of twenty-five pounds. The testator further said that, having so far as he knew, no relations in the world, he had no one of his own blood to provide for, and he therefore left the sum of five thousand pounds, of which twelve hundred was in the keeping of Lorimer Seeley and Caroline Bird, to various hospitals which he named. And in consideration of the constant friendship and care of his dear friend, William Campbell Folgate, M.B., he bequeathed to him all the personal with the usual exceptions, and he further appointed the same William Campbell Folgate, M.D. his executor and trustee.

The doctor appeared to be both surprised and affected by the reading of this document, but Lorimer listened in stony silence, and with his eyes fixed on the doctor's face in a manner so peculiar that that gentleman grew nervous and restless under it, and cut the remainder of their visit to the lawyer's office as short as possible.

As the two men went downstairs together and out into the street, Dr. Folgate drew near to his companion and said,—

"It is a very distasteful thing, Mr. Seeley, for us to have antagonistic feelings towards each other at such a time as this. I quite understand how you must feel about that part of his will in which poor Desborough cuts off, in the case of her marriage, the income he leaves Miss Bird. But if the estate should be large enough to allow it (and remember, I have no idea at present how much there is), I shall certainly not hold strictly to that provision of the poor fellow's. I see that it was only the natural outcome of his jealousy of you, and I shall not hesitate to continue the payment of the income to her (if, as I say, the estate admits of it) after her marriage as before."

Lorimer towered over him with disgust and contempt shining in his eyes.

"You will do nothing of the kind," said he, sharply. "If poor Desborough has left a residue of his property according to the provisions of that will—"

"And what reason have you to doubt it?" asked the doctor, quickly.

Lorimer did not heed the question, but repeated doggedly, "If he wished to leave his money in this fashion his wishes are to be respected and must be carried out. Miss Bird would be the first to say so. Good-morning."

He left the doctor abruptly, and returned once more to the flat, to ask the housekeeper if he could help in any way. But she answered him rather drily, Lorimer thought, that Dr. Folgate had taken upon himself all the arrangements that had to be made, and had told her to say so to anyone who asked.

So he went back to Passy, where he found Carrie and Mrs. Parkin together, both in a state of extreme agitation.

"Is it true? Is he really dead?" asked Carrie, whose eyes were red with weeping.

Lorimer bowed his head. "It's quite true. I saw him. Poor Dick!" Carrie drew himself up.

"And do you believe he died a natural death?" she asked impulsively.

"The doctors say so," answered Lorimer, evasively.

"Of course one of them does!"

"All the French doctor whom I called in agrees with him."

"What became of the money?" asked Mrs. Parkin, suddenly.

"That goes to Dr. Folgate"—the ladies interrupted him with exclamations, but he went on—"with the exception of certain legacies, and of three hundred a year, which you, Carrie, are to have—until you marry."

The girl looked up quickly, her face flushing. Then she fell to trembling violently, and was very still and silent until the conversation was over, and Mrs. Parkin went away with Lorimer, who took her to the hotel she chose.

Then he went back to Passy, and seeing Carrie at one of the windows of the boarding-house, where he had decided she had been looking out for him, he beckoned her to come out to him.

In two minutes they were walking slowly down the street together.

"Well, my dear girl, at any rate you're provided for," said he, after a short silence.

"Yes," said Carrie, huskily.

"You won't have to lead the terrible life you did before, thank heaven!"

"No."

Still she did not look up.

"Poor Dick didn't forget you. He would have done more, I'm very sure, but—but for certain circumstances."

"Dr. Folgate? Yes, of course. It was good of him. Only—unless his memory! I can't take the money"; her voice grew hoarse and more tremulous than ever, "but I shall never forget his kindness to me. Poor Dick!"

Lorimer was silent a moment. Then he asked, in a very low voice, "What do you mean—you cannot take the money?"

The girl hesitated.

"I want to—be—free!" whispered she at last.

Lorimer only hesitated long enough to get one swift glance at her face, and then he drew her quickly into a side street, where, in the dusk, he kissed her.

"God bless you, Carrie, my darling!" said he into her ear.

She drew a long sigh.

"I can't hold out any longer," said she. "But oh! Lorimer, it seems wrong to be happy, as I can't help doing, with poor Dick lying dead, and with the certain knowledge that it would have been better for you if you had never met me, never seen me!"

"Hush, hush! Can the world be worse for us both than it has been? No, no, no. It will be better, a thousand times better. My darling, you shall be my happiness and I will be yours."

"I pray that I may be! And I'll try with all my heart."

So, a quarter of an hour very few words, arm-in-arm through the quiet streets, they went along, enjoying the peace which was chequered with pain in solemn tranquillity. Their tings of jealousy which had prevailed with the generous-hearted but easily-led Dick made it possible for them to feel free, as they would not have done if he had provided for Carrie unconditionally.

Still, knowing the evil influence which had been at work with him, neither felt anything but sorrow for the dead man, with the exception of a portion of a fortune which had been so much more secure than he had fancied.

When they saw Mrs. Parkin again she was all for an attempt being made to upset the will, on the ground of undue influence; and with Lorimer assured her that the doctor had acted so cunningly that any such attempt would be useless, and that for Carrie would never take any steps in the matter, Carrie echoed his sentiments heartily.

On the day of the funeral, Carrie and Lorimer went out to the cemetery together, and when they arrived at the place they found there not only Mrs. Parkin, Madame Bertin, and of course Dr. Folgate, had come too, but also the Basings' solicitor who had drawn up the will.

Lorimer and Carrie exchanged a few words with the women, but only bowed to the men before they stood, stood, shivering in the drizzling rain of a wet and windy day, round poor Dick Desborough's grave.

When the service was over, and Dr. Folgate had placed on the ground by the grave a wreath so enormous that Carrie's handful of flowers was lost in the mass, Lorimer and she went quickly and quietly out together, Carrie anxious to be out of hearing of the ostentatious sobbing of the residuary legatee.

At the gates Lorimer felt a sharp tap on his shoulder, and turning, found that it was Mr. Bankes who was detaining him.

"I want to speak to you on business—important business," said the solicitor.

CHAPTER XX.

Lorimer was surprised.

"Here? Now?" said he.

And noticing the group who were thus stopping to talk, Dr. Folgate drew near enough to hear what was passing.

"Well, no, not here. It will be better if I see the lady with whom you accompany me back to my office. And you too, Dr. Folgate," he went on, turning to the doctor, who looked surprised and displeased at the order. "It will be better for you to come also."

He said no word more concerning the matter that was in question, but Carrie noticed a curious smile on the face of Madame Bertin, the late housekeeper at the flat, who had also stopped to watch the short conference. However, as soon as she observed that her expression had attracted the young lady's attention, Madame Bertin trudged hastily away, and left these four to return to Paris in the same carriage.

It was a strange party. The solicitor chatted away with the doctor, who seemed slightly nervous and excited, and who was in consequence rather more animated than was consistent with his abandonment to grief at the graveside. Mr. Bankes' manner betrayed nothing. He entered readily into conversation with Dr. Folgate, and the two young people sat silent, Lorimer with his arm at his side by side on the front seat of the carriage, and exchanged neither a word nor a look until they reached their destination.

When they had all gone up to Mr. Bankes' office he requested them to be seated, and Carrie saw very well that had a statement to make which he believed would come as a surprise to them all.

"You are all aware," he went on, "that the late Mr. Desborough sent Dr. Folgate for me on the morning of the day preceding his death, and that he then, in the presence only of myself and one of my English clerks, made a will in the terms of which you know. It was duly witnessed by my clerk and by Madame Bertin, Mr. Desborough's housekeeper, who, by-the-bye, is well acquainted with the English language."

The doctor looked slightly surprised at this last observation, and Mr. Bankes looked in his direction.

"Madame Bertin appears to have been altogether a more astute person than one usually expects to meet in the rank of life," added Mr. Bankes.

"But I believe that you are none of you aware," continued the solicitor, "that there is a later will than the one you have heard about or seen."

At that Dr. Folgate visibly started and looked at Lorimer, but Lorimer looked up in great surprise.

"About an hour after I had left Mr. Desborough's flat, for the company of Dr. Folgate," droned on Mr. Bankes' monotonous voice, "I was surprised by a visit from the housekeeper, Madame Bertin, who said Mr. Desborough had sent her in a great hurry to me, and that he wanted me to return at once to the flat, and to bring with me a clerk as before. She said his message was that I was to make haste, as Dr. Folgate might be back in a few minute."

The doctor started up, livid with rage.

"I protest!" cried he, loudly, "I strongly protest against this most infamous insinuation—"

"Sit down, doctor," said Mr. Bankes, just as drily as ever; "you will have time to enter your protests presently."

Pale as the dead, the doctor sank back into the chair from which he had risen, and fixing his eyes on the worn carpet, did his best to appear unmoved as the solicitor went on,—

"I lost no time in obeying this injunction, and in less than twenty minutes from the receipt of this summons I was again with Mr. Desborough. I found him in a state of extreme agitation, and he made certain statements to me, in the presence of my clerk, which I need not at present repeat."

"He was in a wandering state of mind, probably," suggested the doctor. "I tried hard to find him, just previously, in a highly-excited and nervous condition. You, Miss Bird, were in the room with him when I entered. You must remember that you at once began to say things which you had no right to say in the presence of an invalid."

Before Carrie could speak, Mr. Bankes cut in again.

"Mr. Desborough was certainly perfectly clear in the head while I was with him, Dr. Folgate. He told me that Miss Bird had asked you, in his presence, why you had deceived him by stating that a certain lady was in Paris, and at a certain address, when in as a matter of fact, she was not there at all. Do you deny this? Did nothing of the sort take place?"

"I—I—" stammered the doctor, "I remember nothing of that."

Carrie sat open-mouthed. He did not dare to deny it, for her presence, that she had used these words, since the solicitor had obtained confirmation of them from Desborough's own lips.

Then, as there was a slight pause, the doctor plucked up courage and went on: "If those were all the statements you refer to, they were of no great importance. It was an misunderstanding, that's all."

(To be continued.)

GIANTS WHO FOUND FAME.

Tall Tales Told About Tall Men —The King's Porter.

It is long since the coming of a giant to England created such a stir as the advent of "Lofty," the Dutchman who stands nine feet four inches. He has been photographed standing with the Prime Minister at the door of 10 Downing street, a unique distinction for any giant.

There is no doubt that Goliath of Gath was a very giant even outside the region of myth, yet he fell short of the stature of the Dutchman by nearly a foot, for the Biblical measurement is given as "six cubits and a span," which in modern feet and inches is "eight-foot-six," but the Philistine whom David killed with a sling stone seems to have been, unlike many giants, well proportioned and "a mighty man of valor" despite his boastfulness.

The famous Russian giant, Loushkin, who served the czar as drum-major of the Imperial Guards, is stated to have measured eight feet five inches. Frederick the Great's Scottish giant was not quite eight feet three inches.

The famous porter of Charles I. who is said to be responsible for a mark high up on the walls of Windsor Castle, a man named William Evans, who died in 1632, is said to have been exactly eight feet high, and Louis, the French giant, whose left hand is preserved in the Royal College of Surgeons' Museum, was only seven feet four inches in height. The Irish giant, O'Brien, whose skeleton is at Dublin, was a good deal greater height, but Pliny, the Roman philosopher, gives to one Gabbaras, an Arabian, nine feet five and a half inches, and to another eight feet five inches. Frederick the Great's Scottish giant was not quite eight feet three inches.

Miller, who was known as the Saxon giant, who died in London at the age of sixty—an unusual age for a giant to survive—in 1734, was eight feet in height.

Tricks of the Tides.

As most people know, the tides are produced by two pairs of waves which travel round the earth daily, the greater pair produced by the pull of the moon, the smaller by the attraction of the sun.

So far, simple enough, and if the earth's surface was all water the matter would be perfectly regular, no tidal wave can travel very far before it bumps against land, and the results are exceedingly complicated.

For instance there is a strip of coast in the south of England which has double tides. These occur from Southampton to a little beyond Poole, and it is to this phenomnon that Southampton owes its position as one of the greatest seaports, for at nearly all times there is water to allow of the biggest ships coming in.

At Colombo, in Ceylon, the same thing may be seen—four tides daily instead of two; but the oddest freak of all is at Papeete, one of the Society Islands, in the South Pacific, where high tide occurs always between the midday and two o'clock.

On our own coasts the biggest tides are in the Bristol Channel, where, at the mouth of the Avon, the difference between ordinary high and low tide is 40 feet. At Chepstow, a little further up the Severn, it is 60 feet! They are said to pile up an ever-narrowing funnel causes the roaring wave called the Severn Bore.

The biggest tide in the world is in the Bay of Fundy, where the extreme rise and fall differs by 70 feet. Up Stoney Creek, at the head of the bay, it is said, the water rushes at 0.61 miles an hour.

The smallest tide so far observed is in Lake Superior. It does not rise more than 1½ inches.

ASTHMA NEVER CAME BACK

Since Taking The Fruit Treatment in "Fruit-a-tives"

Read this letter from Mrs. J. M. Pennington of New Rockland, P.Q.

"In 1919, I was taken with Bronchial Asthma and no one knows what I suffered during the winter. I began having choking spells and would just gasp for breath and could not speak. The doctor said he could do nothing for me.

In the spring of 1920, I started taking "Fruit-a-tives" and soon the choking spells became easier and I have not had one since May 7th, 1920. It is a relief to be able to get up to bed and have no thought of having to get up in the night for an hour or more as I did all that winter, but never have to now, all because I take a "Fruit-a-tives" tablet every night.

WANTS TO HELP OTHER WOMEN

Grateful for Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ont.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache and for weak and dreary feelings caused by my condition. Sometimes I felt so bad that I couldn't do my housework. My neighbor told me of your medicine and I read about it in the Toronto Telegram and thought I would take it. I got very good results. It built me up and I have told several friends what it has done for me. You may use this testimonial as it may be of help to some one who has suffered as I have."—Mrs. J. Lee, 25 Harvie Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Mrs. Lee is willing to write to any girl or woman suffering from such troubles, and answer any questions they may like to ask.

Women suffering from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, pains, bearing-down feelings and weakness should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Not only is the worth of this medicine shown by such cases as this, but for nearly fifty years letters like this have been received from thousands of women.

Write confidentially if interested in reading Mrs. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon the "Ailments of Women." You can get a copy free by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario. C

Peculiar Philippine Buffalo.

When Americans first went to the Philippines they were much interested in the oddlooking beast known there as the "water buffalo"—a smaller variety commonly used as a draft animal, but giving little milk. It is excessively addicted to the mire and wallow in China. The brute cannot endure hard work in the sun unless its skin is frequently wet, and hence its habit of wallowing in mud or water. If overcome by the heat it may get crazy and is liable to be dangerous. But the milch buffalo, kept for dairy purposes, needs no water hole.

Japanese Idea of Tea.

The first thing which happens when you pay a call in Japan, be it a business or social call, is the arrival of a cup of clear Japan tea, and the second and third things which happen are the arrival of the second and third cups, writes Julian Street in Mc-Clure's. The tea of Japan is green tea, and it is taken without cream or sugar. For cups having no handles. Such tea is made with hot—not boiling—water. Tea in its highest sense is not a beverage, but a creed, a ritual, a philosophy.

During the second week of September there will be many visitors to Napanee and District Old Boys' and Girls' Re-Union. They will miss the faces of many of their dear old friends who have passed away, and will look up their last resting place in our beautiful cemetries. If you have not placed a monument, or Marker, to show where they lie, call and select one from our large assortment, and let us erect it for you before Sept. 8.

European and American Children.

Nowhere are children allowed to be children as long as they are in the United States, Helen Beckett declares in the New York Sun. The sensible points which mothers and designers have selected for American children provide a great contrast to the absurd styles decreed for the children of Europe and England. These styles rob the nations of their children and throw them into manhood long before nature meant them to be there, and in America alone it seems that boys may be boys until they are quite through with their games and their shouting.

In Spain, especially in the inland cities, the little girls begin to wear black at the age of six. They are thin and sallow, and their beautiful dark eyes look grave and childlike as they walk on their mother's arm to church, with their high heels, black frock, long black gloves, black fan and black mantilla, a bit of lace thrown bewitchingly over the eyes in the sweltering heat of July.

There are tens of thousands of children in Latin countries who look inappropriately dressed. In the Azores, for instance, one may see a lad of 12 in long trousers, long black frock coat with buttonhole bouquet; he carries a cane, his hat and gloves (which he must hold just so and never put on).

SHE HAD HIS NUMBER.

He was a new arrival in this country and was none too familiar with the telephone, so he took the receiver and demanded:

"I want to talk to me wife!"

Central's voice came back sweetly: "Number please."

"Oh," he replied, perfectly willing to help out, "she bane my second wife!"

SCHOOL TIME NEEDS

School Opens Tuesday, September 2nd

Make Robinson's Your Headquarters for School Wearing Apparel

The "Admiral" Middy

Serves all your School Requirements

The average school girl is considered "well-dressed" when gowned in middy and pleated skirt. Some schools have adopted this combination as a standard uniform and will not permit any departure only on special occasions.

We particularly stress the "Admiral" Middy because it represents the "Best" obtainable in Canada.

"Best" for the price when materials are considered.

"Best" in detail and finish when workmanship is considered.

"Best" in newest style features.

For Fall wear the long regulation is fashionable. These come with flannel trimmings as well as all white.

Obtainable in all sizes up to 20.

Let us show you—please.

FOR FALL AND WINTER WEAR THE "BURBERRY" IS AGAIN THE COAT

Styles come and styles go, season after season passes and each year we find that "Burberry" styled coats remain in the front ranks of fashionable popularity.

For school-girls, business women or for motorists we know of no coat that will render such satisfactory service.

Our present range of Fall and Winter Burberrys are made from beautiful all wool plaid back coatings that come from the best mills in Canada and England.

Workmanship is a second outstanding characteristic of our coats.

Obtainable in a fine range of colorings with self and fur trimmings.

Priced well within the reach of all. On display now.

Pleated Skirts

PLEATED SKIRTS ARE STRONG FOR FALL

MADE IN CREPES, PLAIDS AND SILKS.

In the modern woman's wardrobe separate skirts are held in high favor.

For innumerable occasions a Separate Skirt is the only logical garment to wear, hence it is important to keep your skirts up to the minute in styles and materials.

For Fall and Winter wear, fashion favors pleated styles when created from materials as plain and fancy crepes, plaid woollens, plain twills and silks.

Women looking for pleated skirts that will give satisfaction, will find in our present stocks garments of unsurpassable beauty and charm at moderate prices.

We invite your inspection.

"SCARFS" HAVE MUCH TO DO WITH FALL STYLES
NEW FALL STOCKS ARE HERE

When it comes to separate scarfs those made from knitted Fibre Silk are selected nine times out of ten.

Our present stock radiates a wealth of plain colors as well as combinations of several colors. Stripes and bars running throughout the entire scarf along with bar ends, constitute the vogue as far as styles are concerned.

These beautiful accessories are worn with suits, coats, dresses and sports wear.

Choose your requirements early while our assortments are wide and varied.

"LA BELLE" CREPE PER YARD $1.75

As Crepe fabrics will be in demand this coming season, we beg to introduce this new line.

We are quite confident that this new Silk Crepe, in its rich colorings, its undoubted good quality and unusual value, will appeal to every one of good judgment. It is some time since we have had such a remarkable range of shades as the list we are presenting here.

"La Belle" Crepe is a registered silk fabric and is sold exclusively by us. It is firm in weight, made of pure silk and if required will wash perfectly. We are showing this crepe in twelve splendid shades, Navy, Zinc, Serpentine, Powder Blue, Springtime, Louis Philipi, Orchid, Cocoa, Whirlpool, Nile, Black, Apricot. 40 in. wide, special value $1.75.

OUR MILLINERY DEPARTMENT HAS RE-OPENED FOR FALL

The new Autumn Hats are here in wide variety of styles and colors.

Many interesting varieties will be presented for your inspection.

Early shoppers will find us splendidly equipped to serve them.

We invite your inspection right now. Robinson's.

ALL THE NEW CLOTHS AND STYLES FOR MEN'S AND YOUNG MEN'S MADE-TO-ORDER CLOTHING

Came to hand this week. There are hundreds of different cloths in Serges, Worsteds, Vicunas, Scotch Tweeds, etc., for you to choose from.

Remember this, that when you give us your order for a Suit of Clothes or an Overcoat to be made to your measure, the measurements and descriptions are taken very carefully, a pattern is drafted for you, and the garments are then carefully cut from the cloth and made by the most expert workmen in Canada.

The Robinson Co. guarantee is always back of these garments, and fit and workmanship are absolutely guaranteed by us.

The new Style Plates show Three Young Men's Sport Models, Four Young Men's English Models, Three Young Men's Conservative Models, Six Young Men's Extreme English Models, Four Men's Staple Models, Stout Men's Models, Stub Men's Models, etc., and an equally large number of styles in Men's Overcoats.

The English styles are the keynote for all styles this Fall and Winter. Some of them are very extreme, but one can have just the style they want.

Remember the cloths we are showing are the best in fabric and pattern that have been produced by the world's best makers., and then the Fit Reform Tailoring Establishment is the best High Class Tailoring Firm in Canada.

Let us show you these new cloths and new styles, whether you wish to buy or not.

Quality, Service, Value.
